BROADER MARKET — WEEK IN REVIEW

- A broad risk-off week: the S&P 500 fell 1.6%, the Nasdaq slid 2.9% and the Dow lost 0.9% as a semiconductor rout led megacap tech lower on fresh AI-valuation fears (SMH off more than 4%).
- Clear defensive rotation — Energy (+4.7%), REITs (+2.2%) and Consumer Staples (+1.3%) led the tape while chips and communication services lagged.
- Netflix cratered roughly 11% Friday to a 52-week low on soft Q3 revenue guidance and a shift to annual engagement reporting, despite an in-line Q2 print; Alphabet and Broadcom also fell hard on the week.

› Macro cross-currents: oil jumped after President Trump reinstated a blockade on Iranian shipping through the Strait of Hormuz, and a new Chinese AI model from startup Moonshot added to chip-valuation jitters. Big banks (GS, JPM) beat but gave back mid-week gains.
