BROADER MARKET — WEEK IN REVIEW

‣ All three major U.S. indexes finished the week lower, with the S&P 500 off about 0.6% and the Magnificent 7 notably underperforming the broader market.

‣ The Nasdaq posted its first back-to-back weekly loss since late March, dragged by an AI capital-spending scare and a semiconductor selloff — Intel fell ~6.5% despite an earnings beat and memory names like Sandisk dropped nearly 11%.

‣ A spike in oil prices on renewed Iran tensions weighed on growth and tech; energy held up comparatively well, with Exxon firm on the week.

> Sentiment looks stretched: Bank of America's Bull & Bear indicator hit its highest reading since 2021 — a contrarian caution flag heading into a heavy Fed-plus-megacap-earnings week.
